WAS LORD WEARDALE WHIPPED IN MISTAKE FOR MR. ASQUITH?

The accused (x) off to Holloway Prison.

A recent portrait of Lord Weardale.

Lord Weardale.

Lady Weardale, who was with her husband.

The suffragette entering a four-wheeled cab on leaving Clerkenwell Police Court.

Lord Weardale was knocked down and struck with a dog whip by a suffragette yesterday morning. He was with his wife at the time; and was catching a train at Euston 'Station when an unknown woman attacked him from behind with a whip. It is said the woman explained to the police that she mistook Lord Weardale for Mr.

Asquith. He is certainly very like the Premier, but even more like Sir Herbert Tree.
Any way, Lord Weardale is a president of the Anti-Suffragist Society, so the suffragette in all probability does not regret her act. Most men will feel thankful just now that they do not resemble Cabinet Ministers.

DOG WHIP ASSAULT ON PEER.

Suffragette Mistakes Lord Weardale for Mr. Asquith.

FELLED BY BLOW.

Scene at Euston Before Departure of Wedding Special.

'A suffragette, armed with a dog whip, made a sensational attack yesterday on Lord Weardale, having mistaken him for Mr. Asquith.

having mistaken him for Mr. Asquith.

The assault took place at Euston Station. Lord Weardade was to have attended the wedding of Lady Adelaide. Spencer at Althorp Park, and had just arrived on the platform to join a special train when a suffragette, young and pretty, rushed forward, and struck him with a dog whip.

When arrested she refused to give her name or any account of herself, and at Clerkenwell, where she was afterwards charged and remanded, she still remained silent.

The name of the silent suffragette was later stated by Mrs. Dacre Fox, of the Women's Social and Political Union, to be "Miss Mary Lindsay, of London, aged twenty-four."

Lord Weardale, who, as the Hon. Philip Stanhope, was a well-known Liberal M.P., is a cousin of Lord Rosebery, and is sixty-sween years old. (Photographs on page 1.)

SILENT WOMAN IN BLACK.

Dramatic in the extreme was the scene at Euston, which occurred while a crowd was watching the arrival of some 200 guests for the wedding at Althorp Park.

As Lord and Lady Weardale were walking towards the departure platform a youing woman in black rushed from the crowd and pulled from the crowd and pulled from the crowd and part of the wardale force by the platform and struck at Lord Weardale force by.

Weardale ficrcely.

So unexpected was the attack, and so energetic was his assignar's rush, that Lord Weardale fell headlong to the platform.

The young woman was immediately arrested by the station police, and Lord Weardale was assisted to his feet.

Lord Weardale abandoned his intention of attending the wedding, and with the police officers and the suffragette walked to Albany-street Police Station.

"The arrested girl is very pretty, indeed," said a station official. "She had a very determined manner, and did not say anything when arrested; she just sat down and looked straight in front of her."

"LOVE ALONE FIRES ME."

Anguished letters, written by a husband, were ranginished retters, which by a hisband, were read in the Divorce Court yesterday, when the hearing was begun of the petition for divorce of Mrs. Emmeline Muller.

She alleged cruelty and misconduct on the part of her husband, Mr. Arthur G. Muller, a lieutenant in the Navy. He denied the charges, and cross-petitioned for a dissolution of his marriage on the alleged ground of his wife's misconduct with Mr. Douglas H. Wilson, also an officer in

The presence of the Duke of Mariborough in the Peers Gallery during the Chancellor's speech in the Commons on the land question seems to have escaped the notice of the Fourth Estate. Yet, leaning eagerly forward, his chin pressed against the rail, he was probably the most interested listener in the House. The Duke has pronounced views of his own on the land problem, and this was recently shown when, a short time ago, he began to put Blenheim Park under the plough.

The Kipling of Old.

Duke and Chancellor

It was good to read Mr. Kipling's speech yesterday. It took us back to the atmosphere of ten years, ago, when it was considered a crime to be patriotic or to love manliness. In these days the high priest of preciosity, Mr. Richard Le Gallienne, water an easy talling. Richard Le Gallienne, wrote an essay telling us all what he thought of Mr. Kipling and his school. "No, I shan't tell the public what I think of Mr. Le Gallienne," said Kipling once.

Petrol Before Literature.

Petrol Before Literature.

I made a pilgrimage to Rottingdean some years ago to try to get Kipling to talk for my own private edification. I was, at least, a fervent disciple. I found him on his hands and knees at the side of a dusty road gazing almost with ferocity into the interior of his first motor-car. There seemed to be something extremely wrong. With the temerity of fanaticism I broached the object of my visit. Kipling fooked at me as though he could not have heard aright; then, with an explosive gesture, dismissing all literature as having rather less than the value of a pinch of salt, he said: "If you can tell me what's the matter with this wretched motor-car, you're welcome; if not, go away."

Not a Fashion Plate.

Not a Fashion Plate.

Not a Fashion Plate.

I never saw a man look so miserable at high social functions as Mr. Kipling does, except perhaps, Mr. Thomas Hardy. On the Fourth of June last year he was at Eton, the guest of the headmaster, with any number of other notabilities. Dressed in a rather shabby blue suit, Mr. Kipling patiently wrote his autograph for a crowd of fashionably -dressed women twittered with adulation. When he left he gave a deep sigh. He put on a pipe at the railway station and looked happy again.

POOR PEOPLE'S DIVORCE.

Legal Aid To Be Assigned in Law Courts to Persons of Little Means.

There is good news for husbands and wives too oor to commence divorce proceedings in the ordipoor to commence divorce proceedings in the ordinary way.

A few weeks hence an official will be appointed to each division of the High Court—the King's Bench, the Chancery and the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty—whose duty I will be to assign connaed and solicitors to poor persons whose property does.

The new rules will also benefit workmen and other dependents who consider themselves entitled to make claims under the Employers' Liability Act and Workmen's Compensation Act.

An enormous increase of work at the Courts may therefore be anticipated when, probably during the month of April, the new rules come into operation.

A Poor Persons' Legal Department is to be opened at the Royal Courts of Justice in the early future.

ELECTION DAY TRAGEDY.

Liberal Worker Falls Dead at Slough-Bethnal Green Polling To-day.

A tragic incident marked the polling yesterday in South Buckinghamshire to choose a successor to Lord Parmoor, better known as Sir Alfred Cripps. Late in the afternoon one of the Liberal workers died suddenly in Mr. Tonman Mosley's committee-rooms at Slough. He appeared quite well a few minutes before and apparently had a fit. The result of the polling will be declared to-day. The candidates are:

Mr. Baring du Pre (Unionist) and Mr. Tonman Mosley (Liberal). Unionist majority 1910-2,556. After a very spirited and exciting campaign, South-West Bethnal Green polls to-day.

NEW FLORAL DISCOVERY THAT SAVES HALF THE COST OF CUT FLOWERS.

No More Prematurely Drooping, Dying, and Decaying Flowers.

NATIONAL extravagance has suddenly ceased to be an extravagance. Science A has discovered "Fleurettes," which save half the cost of cut flowers. No people in the world love flowers like the English. The adornment of her home with flowers is the hall-mark of every lady. No matter how slender her purse, she willingly forgoes

"IT is my only extravagance," she often says to herself as she arranges the fair and fragrant. What though in those holders they die untimely deaths, their presence has (for all too brief a time) beautified the home.

But now "Fleurettes" (150 in a box for 2s. 6d.) will lengthen the lives of cut flowers—and do so by endowing the water of their vases or bowls with the radium-like elements of their like, health, beauty and fragrance.

"FLEURETTES"

Make Cut Flowers Last Longer than Uncut Blossoms.

"CILCURE TIES" and they would last on their wheat parent stems.

Each half-crown's worth of cut flowers may now be preserved more than twice as long as before at the triffing cott of one-fifth of 1d, per vase (150 in box for 2s. 6d.).

Extraordinary Effect on Foliage and Flowers.

THE same extraordinary vivifying qualities that make "Fleurettes" charge the water supply of tul flowers with the Radium-like elements of those plants condemned to live their lives in pottery prisons.

Then, do not throw away the "Flewettes," charged water from the vases. Use it to your Ferns, Greenhouse and Window Plonts, It will have the same most marvellous and immediate effect whom these plants, too, vioubiling the rate of growth of Pot-Plants, and inducing an amazing projution of perfect blooms of brilliant colouring. In the House it will make your Ferns a mass of fronds of all, tones, ranging from the tenderest green to the richest dark clive.

Save Money with "Fleurettes."

YOUR Home, Conservatory or Greenhouse can be bowers of bloom if you use "Fleurettes." These wonder-working "Fleurettes" will enable you to keep every vase and bowl in your home filled with fresh flowers.

you have to do is to drop in "Fleurette" when changing the water.

WIND IN LONDON.

THE night before last, rather suddenly. a high wind began to blow over London; coming, as it seemed, out of the country beyond Putney and Wimbledon. 'As it made towards the East, thousands of jerry-built houses trembled and creaked, and leaned harder than ever against one another for support. Tiles were blown off, doors slammed, window-panes creaked dismally. At street corners, people staggered and held their hats on. It was the proverbial bull in this ugliest of imaginable china shops. It was the madman's visit amongst a company of persons sane to the point of dullness.

In the country, the wind is sometimes acceptable, if only as an audible contrast to the peace indoors by the fire. Poets have saluted this rural madman with delighthave wished to travel his wild way with

Make me thy lyre, even as the forest is . . . —And even those who are not poets can, only by being men and sharing in man's primæval instincts, imagine that they see the living wind as it rushes over the hills—

Like the bright hair uplifted from the head Of some fierce Maenad . . .

-a sensation all the more intense if you need not hold a hat on, but may stand boldly untidy, and alone, with the trees bending about you.

The country has its advantages. "Dirty" weather is perfectly clean there. Rain in spring brings out indescribable scents from the earth. And a great wind seems to be an immortal person, sweeping the old world

But in London, as you lie awake, listening to the wind, the madman seems oddly out of place.

His function here is merely to remove hats and to disarrange hair. You hoped to arrive tidy at the dinner, but he caught you annoyingly, and tore at you, as you were paying the cab, and watching the cabby go through his invariable plunging gymnastics in the search for change. Your beautiful hair was twisted by the madman into wisps and strings sticking out comically all round. As or to be successful out comeally all round. As you enter the room (where the fire has just been smoking) your first remark is the same as that of nearly all the other people present: "What a nuisance this wind is, to be sure."

In other words, for once in London, the city people have been forced to notice Nature; to feel the elemental in the artificial; to be aware, uneasily, of the roar of cial; to be aware, uneasily, of the roar of forces "beyond the flaming ramparts of the world." This, as we said, is well enough on the borders of a moor, in sight of the sea, on the hills, in the woods—"anywhere out of the world." But the world—in the narrower sense—has a civilised objection to madmen, and if they could, we may be the that the inconserous classes would shut the that the prosperous classes would shut the wind out of London. W. M.

The Essentials of your Food

WHY DO WE EAT? To supply material necessary producing bone, muscle, blood, and to create that energy which is our very life.

What should we eat? Careful thought in selecting our diet means more to our general health and fitness than almost anything. Our food should be chos n so as to minim se the strain upon the digestive organs. Our food should be non-irritant, easily assimilated and extremely nourishing.

For these very same reasons you should eat Turog regularly. In Turog you get the very material your body needs, the full food force of wheat—Nature's ordained foodstuff. Turog bread is made from finely-ground selected wheats prepared by our exclusive process, and it is because of this that it is more digestible, more nourishing, and more palatable than any other bread known. Remember, too, it is absolutely pure.

HARD-WEARING MATERIALS.

This is what Harrot's chief expert on woollen dress materials says about other productions of the season;—

"The new wool ondines are in vari-coloured settipes and a moire effect, as well as perfectly plain weaves. The idea is to combine the plain and fancy ondine in one tailor-made suit, a coat of moire or of striped material being worn with a polain skirt.

TESTING SILK.

Now we come to silks.

Now we come to silks.

"In buying a silk, how can a woman tell whether it is likely to wear well?" was the question put to the chief of the silk department of the same store.

"A good general rule is to run the fugers along the silk and gently pull it," was the expert's reply. It is not to be recommended for wearing.

"In buying the rich tinsel silks which are such a feature of present-day fashion women need not now fear that the tinsel will tarnish. These tinsel broades are so well made, and so soft and supple, that the tinsel, which, by the way, is given by a solution of real gold, is not at all liable to tarnish, the solution of real gold, is not at all liable to tarnish, the solution of real gold, is not at all liable to tarnish, the solution of real gold, is not at all liable to tarnish, the solution of real gold, is not at all liable to tarnish, which by the way, is given by a solution of real gold, is not at all liable to tarnish, which we have to go a long way as a distinctive trimming, "Among the new silks, for instance, there is a Roman_stripe on a satin ground, which would make a very effective trimming, the gorgeous colourings of the stripes—blues, magentas, golds, purples and greens—showing up on a black background."

"I could tell you, sir. It might be weeks, or he might be back to morrow. He travels, sir, for a firm that has interests here in England and on the Continent."

"Travels in what?" asked Mr. Slew.
"Lace, sir.—Swiss and French lace, sir."
Mrs. Grace touched the fichu she wore.
"This was a present, sir, from Mr. Bone."
"Hodeed!" said Mr. Slew.
"Vou see, sir, when he goes away he locks up the top floor. He has a key to the front door as well. But don't tell me, sir, that Mr. Bone has been up to some wrong? I don't want to be dragged into anything, ster."

Mrs. Grace looked bewildered at the question.

"Sir," pleaded Mrs. Grace, "Mr. Bone has always paid his rent regularly; he's been no trouble and very nice to me, and I don't want to do him any harm."

"I don't think it's in your power to harm Mr. Bone," said Slew quietly. The significance of his remark was lost. He had not wished to emphasise it.

remark was lost. He had not wished to emphasise it.

"Well, sir," went on Mrs. Grace, with a sigh of relief, "in that case—well, sir, Mr. Bone didn't wax his moustache into spikes, and he wasn't bald-foreheaded with his hair coming into a peak like that. He'd a head of hair in front."

A tough had been discovered in Blue Beard's clamber.

Slew produced another photograph that had been worked up. John Smith was, in this one decorated with a toupé, which made a very considerable difference. Slew did not show it at once to Mrs. Grace. He took out a penalt and penalted an eye-shade over John Smith's left eye. Mr. Slew was no dever John Smith's left eye. Mr. Slew was no dever John Smith's left eye. Slev reassured her. He asked her to treat everything that had passed and should pass between them as sacredly confidential for the present. He could be very impressive. There was a touch of command in his deep-noted voice. He asked her not to mention the real nature of his visit even to her dearest and discreedest friend. His visit could be easily explained to the servant. He had called about rooms.

"And now," went on Slew, "I wish to see over Mr. Bone's shall."

"That you can's do, sir, unless you force the door. It's locked and Mr. Bone's got the key. He was particular about that, sir. He had a special patent lock fitted at his own expense. As I have turned the 50 years, I naturally feel pleased with the result, and needless to add, shall continue to take and recommend Phosferine. I feel ten years younger since the first bottle.'

At Fifty Years of Age, when vitality steadily got weaker, Phosferine alone revived and increased the nervous energy to the extent of giving that "Ten Years Younger" feeling-after a bottle only.

Passing between the crowd. The bridesmaids were dresses of the Vandyke period and pretty lace caps.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Mary's, Brington, Northamptonshire, yester-day, when Lady Adelaide Spencer, daughter of Earl Spencer, was married to the Hon. Sidney Peel, son of the late Viscount Peel, who was for many years Speaker of the House of Commons. Both bride and bridegroom were members of the house-party at Chatsworth (the Duke of Devonshire's seat) during the visit of the King and Queen, and the engagement was announced shortly afterwards.
